

Golub GetHouse at its new office

Employees of Golub GetHouse made the move to their new office in January. The company's headquarters is located on the 23rd floor of the Warsaw Financial Center building, a development completed by the firm back in 1998. The new office has been designed by InDesign, headed by Zbigniew Kostrzewa.

The office spans 610 sqm and includes, among others, 4 conference rooms and 27 work stations. Employees of Golub GetHouse played an important part in arranging the space, as they had their say regarding ergonomics, colours and finishing materials.

"We wanted the new office to project a prestigious and friendly image of the company, at the same time addressing our environmental requirements. An advantage of the new location is close proximity to Mennica Legacy Tower, an investment we are currently developing. We were glad to find out that the solution turned out to be a building our company was involved in," said Czarek Jarzabek, Founder and CEO of Golub GetHouse.

Visitors will pass through an elegant reception area, whose glazed surfaces have been decorated with silhouettes of completed and planned Golub GetHouse buildings. Company values and the motto have been printed on one of the walls. The various parts of the office have been arranged to accommodate meetings, allow for working on computers, having phone conversations and rest. The open spaces are decked in pleasant colours and warm, natural wood panelling. The common areas have been decorated with photo wallpapers featuring views of nature.

Moreover, the new Golub GetHouse office also features a showroom presenting the Mennica Legacy Tower investment, a joint investment of Golub GetHouse and Mennica Polska. Employees involved in this project imbued this original concept of interior design, prepared in cooperation with Decoroom, with its core values.
